"At the words, with uncovered heads and uplified hands, the logarists removed their hats and raised their right hands. The entire audience then knucled, and Dr. Newman gave oftenance in an impressive panyer, after which the assemblage sidently dispersed."

BASE BALL.

Rise and Progress of the Game in the United States.

The constituent principles of base-ball under another name, and meompleter than with some modifications from the present system, have been in constant existence in this contray since the boylood of the oldest reader. The sport which modifications from the present system, love been in constant existince in this country since the boyhood of the oldest reader. The sport which forty years ago the boys played, and in some districts still play, under the name of "townball," presents so many points of similarity to the present game as to make the difference exceptional and the paternity inquestionable.

To enumerate the whole unable of clubs would be as tedous as to form the acquantance of the Smith family. So many anattern organizations exist, that only the most prominent can be instruced. The ploneer club was the old Knicker bocker, which was organized in May, 1845. For according to use it was the only organization the field and it was the John the Bapillat of the pasture in this country. Its efforts to regulate and systematize the game of bose ball were met both with skepticism and vidents, the ponalty of the inflay of all enterphess. Yet in its successive rolls of members, and years of solling worlding, it called forth and made perminent much improvement in the game. For a long time it had to chal.

itt successive rolls of members, and years of solitury working, it called forth and made perminent much improvement in the game. For a long time it had be dival.

The Knickerbocker had to play its competitive games from among hy own members. Then as the purposes and utility of the sport better became known, another one of the same kind sprang up, and took the name of the Washington club. This was in 1849. From that till 1851 the Knickerbocker and the Washington stool take Knickerbocker and the Washington stool when and were wont in those time old days to play semi-annual gimes against each other over in the Elysian Riedls, at Hoboken, which attracted little attention ouslide their own checks. Now and then a stray reporter would chronicle their achievements. If he did it by the regular tabilitation, now well understood, it was freek to the majority of readers, except those who permed the sporting papers, while even those prints rarely inserted the results. On the centrary, did the scribe easily to give what be thought the aspect was in its own language, his account read as timely as that of a detagranai describing a prize light. The demands of the sport now require reporters to be retained by every motropolitan paper, who especially understand the base-bad ven readar, with which also the public hals now, by long prireal, become gradually familiar.

Now for the facts: He left home at Greenville, Tenn., in a bugery, with Colonel Jim Carter, and rode over to Kentucky, and then took the cars for Washington, where he took his seat is the United States Congress as Senator, receiving 82, 600 a year as salary, together with his mileage. Afterward being made a brigadier general by the lamented Lincoln, he was sent to Tennessee as Military Governor. On reaching Tennessee he lorelby took possession of a rehel house right opposite the Capitol, not exceeding one hundred yards. It was a superb mansion, elegantly furnished, and his office was fitted up in the most magnificent manner. Here he lived in the best style, supplied with every comfort, and indeed with every lawty. He manuelately ordered not ago and seize upon all the Confederate whiskey femals fault. I did so, and had it stored away in the Capitol in charge of the provost murshal. I cannot say what became of that whiskey afterward. All can say is thus it was the last leversow of it. [A volce—"Wus it Tennessee whiskey." Loughter.

The Late John Van Buren,

"Prince John" is no more. Another great political light is extinguished. And in the pending crisis lu New York, the loss of this great leader, like that of Dean Richmond will be ser iously felt by the Demogratic party—is indeed irreparable. Richmond could pack and manip ulate conventions, "make up a state" and control thousands of votes through his gigantic business enterprises; but Van Buren was indispensi ble as he was unapproachable on the stump. He always raised the hopes, and excited the eathu n of his followers, which is very essential to party success; he was a master of ridicule and sophistry, and could always seize and expose the weak points in an adversory or his cause, and "make the worse appear the better reason. He seemed to take a flial and affectionate inturest in the fortunes of the Democratic party-the party that had bestowed upon his father its highest honors and prizes. Right or wrong, he aggressions, and painting the hideousness of American Slavery and in arraigning the Hunk-ers as the tools of the slave propagandists of the South, that Prince John made his mark in the polities of the country, and was pronounced the peer of his father in intellect and his superior in the arts of the orator. There was a charm if not a romance about the "Prince." Mer moral qualities, habits or education to assume the part or pursue the sims of a philanthropic or

Christian statesmauship, and he was too honest to play the hypocrite. So that after a spasmodic display of the enthusiasm of political virtue, he subsided into the Tammany orator and politician and made no pretensions to consistency. He went in for spoils, and his policy was to punish his enouges, and reward his friends,—to get power and to keep it, winterer concessions and rday morning, due at Corry at Solclock a. m. run off the track a few miles east of Union. The ntire train was precipitated down the embankment—a distance of forty-two (42) feet, the english and coaches rolling over before reaching the bottom. The engineer, fireman and the conductor Mr. White, were not expected to survive their ligiuries. It is estimated that about fifty passengers were upon the train, which was made up of a sleeping car and two passenger cars. Most, if not all of the passengers were injured, many seriously, and a few of them will probably die but, strange to say, none were killed outright. The sleeping coach contained but four occupants, all of whom were more or tess injured. ther two coaches were well filled, and the occupants suffered severely. Most of the unfor tunate people were conveyed back to Meadville, and 12 or 15 brought on to Corry.

The best of medical attendance was promptly on the ground, and everything that was possible done to alleviate the sufferings of the victims. cause of the accident has not been asceralmost crushed with dark forebodings. tained, but it is generally attributed to a defective rail which caused the engine to mount the fail, dragging the train with it down the declivity. It is a singular circumstance that the last accident on the road happened near the same locality. The cause is supposed to have been a broken rall, and the train was precipitated from the track while at full speed. The wonder of all is that so few were injured and none killed. We are assured that not a passurger last been killed by an accident of this road during the last year. As the news of the accident circulated through the city, and the injured ones arrived, mony might have been seen hurrying to and fro, inquiring for friends, and saking the names of the mofortunates. The Boston House was crowded with our citizens, and every care and attention were bestowed on the injured.

A Gioripus Union Sonz.

Editors Morning Herald : I send for publication, one of the finest pieces . A send for purposession, one or one mean process of poetry in the English language. It is a song, ontitled "The Union Fing," and first appeared anonymously in the Pittsbury Gazette and was extensively copied in the loyal papers of this content when stores. It is northly model, but and many other States. It is not only poetle, but is also prophetic-not only chaste and classic, but also grand and patriotic. It not only thrills soul with new devotion to the Stars and Stripes of blessed memory. As the song of the thrush or nightingale is hushed by the thunderings which are only awakening to Jove's Eagle, darkest, most despairing and stormest period of the war-when so many were stilled and gazed tremblingly at the hurrleane which seemed to be sweeping over us-inspired the writer with these stanzas, which not only rival but are far superior to the justly celebrated Mar-
